AN ACCOUNT
OF
THE PROGRESS
OF
JOSEPH LANCASTER'S PLAN FOR THE
EDUCATION OF POOR CHILDREN, AND
THE TRAINING OF MASTERS FOR COUNTRY SCHOOLS.

IN the year 1798, Joseph Lancaster opened a school in St. George's Fields, for the education of the children of the poor, at a very reduced charge. In the prosecution of this work he was obliged to devise plans of economy, in order to diminish the expense of books, paper, &c. and also a particular kind of discipline, that he might be able to manage a large number of children without the necessity of employing ushers or assistants with salaries. The present state of perfection exhibited by his schools is the result of numerous experiments and many years indefatigable attention, which he has been enabled to devote to this important subject, by the encouragement of enlightened and benevolent individuals. The school was shortly converted into a Free School, and in the year 1805 it was made sufficiently capacious to contain 1000 children.

The distinguishing features of his plan, which are minutely explained in the publication entitled, 'Improvements in education, (a new edition of which will speedily go to press) are,

1. That by his system of order and rewards, together with the division of the school into classes, and the assistance of monitors, ONE MASTER IS ABLE TO CONDUCT A SCHOOL OF ONE THOUSAND CHILDREN.

2. That by printing a spelling book, or any other lessons for reading, in a large type, upon one side of the paper, and pasting the sheets thus printed, on a pasteboard, they may, when suspended to a nail, against the wall, be read by any number of children;—a method whereby ONE BOOK WILL SERVE FOR A WHOLE SCHOOL, instead of a book for each child.

3. That by the introduction of writing upon slates, and one boy spelling to his whole class any certain word, the boys in the class will instantly write it, going on in this manner for an hour or more, so that boys may write and spell one hundred words in the course of a morning:—A METHOD WHEREBY FIVE HUNDRED BOYS MAY SPELL AND WRITE THE SAME WORD AT THE SAME INSTANT OF TIME.

4. An entire new method of instruction in arithmetic, wholly superseding the former method of setting sums in cyphering books, or using books, as Walkinghame's or Dilworth's Assistant for the four first rules:—A PLAN WHEREBY ANY CHILD WHO CAN READ, MAY TEACH ARITHMETIC WITH THE UTMOST CERTAINTY.

5. The expense of education is reduced to a very trifling sum. Schools for three hundred children may be supported at the rate of seven shillings per annum for each child; and for a greater number of children, it may be reduced to four shillings per annum for each child.

And lastly, while Joseph Lancaster is anxious to lay the foundation of religious and moral principles in the youthful mind, he studiously avoids introducing controverted theological points, and in short, every thing which is peculiar to any sect or party:

The HOLY SCRIPTURES is the only religious book taught in the school—for here, as Sir W. Jones expresses it, we have “purer morality than can be collected from any other book in any language:” or as Locke has well observed, a volume which has “God for its author, salvation for its end, and truth without any mixture of error for its subject.”

By proceeding upon this broad and general basis, there is nothing repulsive to the feelings of any particular sect, but the doors of his schools are thrown open to receive the whole community.

The good which must arise from the extension of these elementary schools, cannot be calculated: their influence upon the morals and conduct of the lower orders of society has already been experienced; and we may entertain more than a hope, that they will not fail to diminish the number of crimes, cherish and promote virtuous dispositions among the great mass of the people, and thus most materially contribute to the happiness and security of the State. In some places where J. Lancaster has established schools, by the committees dividing the children into different bodies, and conducting them to the several places for worship, hundreds of children are taken in an orderly manner to attend divine service, who formerly profaned the Lord’s day by idle and riotous conduct in the streets.

In the Borough school alone 5000 children have been educated, whose parents were of the poorest description, and hitherto no instance has occurred of any one of these being charged with a criminal offence in any court of justice. In this school the progress of the children in learning is rapid; it is no uncommon thing for one or two hundred boys to obtain tickets of commendation daily, and more than one hundred to have rewards for merit in the course of a single week. The improvement in morals, and the habits of order among the children who are educated on this system in town or country is of the most gratifying nature.

In an early stage of his labours J. Lancaster obtained the patronage and liberal support of the DUKE of BEDFORD and LORD SOMERVILLE, whose example was soon followed by many of the Nobility, Clergy, and other characters distinguished for virtue and benevolence. In 1805 he was honoured by the countenance of the KING and QUEEN, the PRINCE of WALES, the PRINCESSES, and the ROYAL DUKES; who then became, and have continued ever since, annual subscribers to a large amount. In the course of the last year, the attention of the Sovereign and Royal Family to the welfare and progress of the Plan, has been most particularly gracious and encouraging. Twice within the year 1809, the KING sent his own Page with his subscription of 100*l*. The Institution has since been visited by the DUKE of KENT, who staid two hours, and by his many attentions to the children, made them completely happy. The account given by the DUKE of KENT to his Royal Parents and august Family has been very gratifying. The Duke has publicly declared, that the system of education resembles, in its practice, the most perfect piece of machinery.

The august and benevolent Personages who promoted this institution for the instruction of the poor, looking forward to the more general diffusion of these benefits, were desirous that a plan should be established for training young men and lads as school-masters, that by a practical knowledge of the improved modes of tuition, they might be qualified to superintend schools to be formed in various parts of the kingdom upon the same plan.

The institution in the Borough Road, therefore, consists of Free Schools for boys and girls, and an Establishment for boarding, clothing, and training up young men and women for school masters and school mistresses, so as to qualify them to undertake the charge of new schools. But it is obvious, that, in the attainment of objects like these, a considerable and heavy expense must be incurred; the annual expense of the Institution, in all its parts, amounts at least to 1400*l*.

It is however very important that the public should rightly distinguish between the expense attending the Free School, and the Establishment for training school masters. In the former case, the expense for ground rent, rewards, and instruction, does not exceed 160*l.* per annum, which is about 3*s.* 6*d.* per annum for the education of each child.—But the support of the Institution for training young school masters and school mistresses, as it involves the board, clothing, and lodging of a considerable family, cannot be supported but at a very considerable charge.

The due application of all subscriptions in aid of his plans and the management of his financial concerns, Joseph Lancaster has entrusted to his friends,

JOHN JACKSON, Esq. M. P. New Broad Street,
 WILLIAM ALLEN, Plough Court, Lombard Street,
 WILLIAM CORSTON, No. 30, Ludgate Street,
 JOSEPH FOSTER, Bromley, Middlesex,
 JOSEPH FOX, 54, Lombard Street, or 27, Argyle St.
 THOMAS STURGE, Newington Butts.

The Committee earnestly solicit the support of the benevolent to enable them to meet the unavoidable expenses attending so large an establishment; and when it is considered that this Institution must be regarded as the root of a tree, whose branches, it is hoped, will extend themselves over the British empire, they trust to a generous public for that ANNUAL AID which is necessary to render their labours efficient.

Subscriptions are received at J. Lancaster's Royal Free School, Borough Road; by the Members of the Committee, and by the following Bankers.

KENSINGTONS, STYAN, AND ADAMS, 20, Lombard St.
 HOARES AND Co. 37, Fleet Street,
 RANSOM, MORLAND, AND Co. Pall-Mall.

Schools have been formed by J. Lancaster in the following places :

Swansea,	Rochester,
Canterbury,	Dover,
Lynn,	Lewes,
Liverpool,	Cambridge,
Hull,	Deptford,
Clewer, near Windsor,	Woburn.
Birmingham,	Uxbridge,
Sheffield,	Manchester,
Bristol,	Lakefield,
Etruria,	Chester,
Oswestry,	Whittington.

Committees are formed in

Portsmouth,	Maidstone,
Plymouth,	Exeter,
Southampton,	Worcester,
Newcastle upon Tyne,	Edinburgh,
Dublin,	Leeds,
Leicester,	Derby,
York,

and in a great number of other places. And it is with great thankfulness J. Lancaster can state, that, in the schools formed by himself and his young assistants, full 30,000 poor children are receiving daily instruction in various parts of the British empire; and he hopes, that the philanthropic aid of a British Public will enable him to continue his labours, until every populous district is provided with the means of education for their poor children.

N. B. One part of JOSEPH LANCASTER's Establishment consists of a Printing Office, in which every kind of business in the printing department is carried on: and, as the profits of this concern form a considerable aid to his Institution, he solicits the orders of his friends and the public in general.

LANCASTER'S Royal Free School is situated near Belvidere Place, Borough Road, not far from the Obelisk; and the Public are respectfully informed, that the School is open for inspection every Afternoon (except Saturday) at three o'Clock.

This Day are Published,
By JOSEPH LANCASTER,
